PETER FORCE

A REGISTER OF HIS PAPERS IN THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

Prepared by

Manuscript Division
Library of Congress

Washington, D.C.

Administrative Information

The papers of Peter Force, printer, editor, and bibliophile, came to the Library of Congress by purchase and by gift, 1867-1970. The largest segment of the papers, namely those collected and transcribed for his work, American Archives, became a part of the Library of Congress' collections in January, 1867 when Congress purchased the "Force Library." Apparently the major group of personal papers were given to the Library of Congress by his son, William Q. Force in 1875, when he moved from Pennsylvania Avenue to K Street. Throughout the twentieth century, the Library of Congress has augmented the papers by purchasing additional personal papers. Edward Stead, great-grandson of Peter Force, added documents regarding the purchase of the Force Library in 1967 and diaries of William Q. Force and several family items in 1970.

"Copyright in the unpublished writings of Peter Force in these papers and in other collections in the custody of the Library of Congress is unknown."

Linear feet of shelf space: 300
Approximately number of items: 150,000

Scope and Content Note

The Papers of Peter Force span the period from 1170 to 1944, with the bulk of the papers dated 1750 to 1868. They consist chiefly of Force's personal papers, plus the transcripts and originals of manuscripts compiled for his nine-volume documentary publication, American Archives. Force's personal papers document his career as a Washington printer, newspaper editor, compiler, and collector. The collection records political, military, scientific, and social aspects of 18th and 19th century America.

In addition to documenting Force's career, his personal papers document his military service and his public service in Washington City; his scientific and intellectual pursuits including his participation in the programs of the National Institute, the Smithsonian Institution, and the Naval Observatory; and his historical interest including his role in organizing the first American Historical Society in 1836. Providing insights into the state of historical scholarship and bibliography, 1830-1868, Force's papers document his plan and his method of compiling the American Archives, and his relationships with historians and antiquarians who often sought his advice, the use of Force's library.

The correspondence consists chiefly of letters received with drafts of letters sent, which relate chiefly to the proposal and Congressional inquiry on the American Archives. Correspondents include: George Bancroft, John Bartlett, James Buchanan, Matthew St. Clair Clarke, Samuel G. Drake, Lyman Draper, John Farmer, Philip R. Fendall, John Forsyth, Joseph Gales, Edward Livingston, Hermann Ernst Ludewig, Francis Markoe, George B. Moore, William Reed, Obadiah Rich, John C. Rives, Henry Rowe Schoolcraft, William Seaton, Buckingham Smith, Ainsworth Rand Spofford, Tobias Watkins, George Watterston, Daniel Webster, Roger C. Weightman, and John Hill Wheeler.

There is little family correspondence, with the exception of a dozen Civil War letters from his son, Manning Ferguson Force, who became a Major-General in the Union Army and served with General William T. Sherman. Force corresponded frequently with his son, Manning, while he studied at Harvard, and later in Cincinnati where he practiced law and served as a judge. This correspondence can be found in the Manning Ferguson Force Papers at the University of Washington and in the microfilm copy of that collection in the Manuscript Division, Ac. 14,541. Also supplementing this father-son correspondence are approximately sixty diary-letters written by Manning during the Civil War to his father, which are now in the Boston University Library. The Force papers also contain diaries and business papers of his eldest son William Q., who remained in Washington, and resided in the same house with father. William worked as an editor, and later as a clerk in the Smithsonian Institution, and his diaries give insights into Washington's religious, intellectual, and scientific community, 1864-1877.

The Printer's File and the Historical Working Papers supplement the correspondence in delineating Force's career as printer and historical editor. The Printer's File records Force's political activities as editor of the John Quincy Adams administration newspaper, the National Journal, and his printing activities. His method of selecting and controlling his massive collection, the condition of American records and personal papers; and mid-19th century American bibliography is revealed in Historical Working Papers.

The Force transcripts consist of copies taken from official records, private papers, and contemporary publications, intended to document political and military aspects of the American Revolution and to appear in the "Documentary History of the American Revolution." Although the transcripts span the years 1526 to 1850, they concentrate in the period 1774 to 1777, the latter period was printed or prepared for printing in the American Archives. The largest groups of transcripts not used in the American Archives are those taken from the Papers of the Continental Congress and the Papers of George Washington at the Department of State, ca. 1833-1850. Force was, therefore, a collector of collections. There are transcripts of Jeremy Belknap, Joseph Vallance Bevan, and William Buell Sprague.

Force secured two major original "collector's collection" - those of Ebenezer Hazard and George Chalmers. The Hazard collection, chiefly transcripts, features New England colonial material, German descriptions of early Pennsylvania, clippings from newspapers and pamphlets on political subjects, 1768-1776, and a collection of materials on the Stamp Act controversy. The Chalmers collection contains historical material on various points in the British Empire; personal letters; and notes illustrative of his career as clerk of the Privy Council. Undoubtedly, Force had planned to incorporate items from these collections, secured in 1846 and 1844, in the first three series of the American Archives. Force also secured some manuscripts of Pierre Du Simitiere, (1737-1784), Philadelphia artist and collector.

The Force papers are rich in documentation of the role of the military in the Colonial Wars and the Revolution. The collection includes papers of Ephraim Blaine, James Davis, Nathaniel Greene, John Paul Jones, Thomas Hamilton, and Charles Simms; numerous private accounts and journals; and orderly books. Segments of the minutes of the Baltimore County, Md., Lancaster County, Pa., New York City and County, and Schenectady, N.Y. Committees of Safety, and the Maryland Vice-Admiralty Court Records were preserved by Peter Force. The Force Papers include: Loan Office Records of Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island; merchants accounts and letterbooks for John E. Caldwell, Forcauld and Co., Robert H. Hunter, Joshua Johnson, John de Neufville and Son, Jonathan and Samuel Smith, and Woolsey Salmon; 18th century meteorological observations of Jacob Cushing and Abiel Holmes; scientific society records of the Columbian and National Institutes. They also include the papers of John Fitch, inventor and craftsman, and Jeremiah Robinson, American diplomat in Latin America in the 1820's.
